Tardis materializing. The clearing up before After a moment the doors open and we hear DODO call out:

DODO: (OFF) Can I go out now?

DR. WHO: (OFF) No. You really must let me go first, child.

Dr. Who appears followed by the others.

DR. WHO: That's funny. Something must have gone wrong! I think we've come back to the same place! Steven, look at this.

Jungle scene. There is no sign of life. Only the muted sounds of small animal life is heard on track.

Doctor Who and the others stare about in bewilderment.

STEVEN: But how?

DR. WHO: I'm not sure. It's never happened before. We moved - but we only travelled through the time barrier. No that is extraordinary.

STEVEN and Base of Statue.
(THEY HURRY TO HER.

DODO IS COMPLETELY STUNNED)

DODO: The statue . . they've finished the statue!

T/C 8 - MODEL STATUE

We see the statue -
but for the time
being not the main deck.

Slowly our gaze travels up the statue, from the feet then to the upper part of the body.
Then we move quickly to the head.
But where there should have been the features of homo sapiens there
is now the terrifyingly reproduced image of a large, grotesque donoid
head.

We zoom in.
